NIGHT CIRCUS THE SAME

Both Performances the Exact
Counterparts—There's a
Popular Belief To Contrary.

NOT SO MUCH AS A SPANGLE REMOVED.

In spite of the fact that the night performances of the big circuses are exact counterparts of that which is exhibited at the afternoon shows, there are many people who hold views to the contrary.

"See, they are taking part of it away," someone will exclaim as he notes a string of red wagons wending their way toward the railroad yards just about the time darkness is falling.

"Oh, yes," answers another, "one never sees the whole show at the night performance."

Yet the conclusion is entirely erroneous. It is true that the management "takes part of it away" from the show grounds in the late afternoon, but that which is removed is in no way connected with that which the public pays to see. It is merely a portion of the paraphernalia which has been used in the morning street parade, the tents which have been used throughout the day to house the hundreds of heavy draught horses, the vast equipment of the dining tents or kitchens, and other "housekeeping" departments.

Take the Ringling Brothers' circus as a case in point. When it visits this city Saturday, September 30, it will feed more than 1,370 people in three dining tents. The food consumed will be cooked on four mammoth ranges. The last of the three meals will have been served at 5:30 p. m. Eleven immense wagons are required to transport the equipment of this one department. Supper over with, these vans will be loaded immediately and started on their way to the waiting trains. In the three miles of street parade there will be scores of band wagons, chariots and tableaus barges that are used solely for street pageant purposes. Ten wagons are required to carry the costumes, banners, flags, and trappings worn or carried by the hundreds of men and women and horses that take part in the parade. So these wagons are loaded and dispatched to the trains at dusk. As a matter of fact they could be moved in the early afternoon but this would not allow a full afternoon's rest for the horses that draw them. Then there are the wagons connected with the blacksmith shops, the harness shop, the barber shop and other departments which run at full blast during daylight hours but which, like the shops of a town, close their doors towards sunset. And they, too, move on.

So when the Ringling Brothers' circus comes to town and you see the twilight caravan on its way to the railroad yards you will know what these departing wagons contain. As for the big show program with its maze of circus acts, tremendous spectacle, "Cinderella" and vast menagerie, you may rest assured that every bit of it from the giant Big Bingo to the tiniest spangle is still at the show grounds awaiting night patrons just as it greeted those who came to the matinee performance.
